K-State theater history professor dies during emergency surgery Saturday

BY DARRINGTON CLARK
THE COLLEGIAN

Daniel Davy, associate professor of theater, died Saturday at Saint Luke's Hospital in Kansas City, Mo. during an emergency surgery.

"It is with tremendous sadness that I convey to you that Daniel Davy, associate professor of theatre history, has passed away over the weekend," Gary Mortenson, director of the School of Music, Theatre and Dance, wrote in a letter sent to K-State theatre students. "My thoughts are with all of you as we remember Dr. Davy's legacy here at Kansas State University."

Mortenson said he was alerted Monday by Daniel's wife, Lynne Davy, and temporarily suspended Davy's classes.

Davy, 69, received a Ph.D in dramatic art from the University of California at Santa Barbara; he taught at the University of California and Ohio University for fourteen years before coming to K-State.

According to his professional page on the K-State website, his favorite quote was, "The voice of intelligence...is drowned out by the roar of fear. It is ignored by the voice of desire. It is contradicted by the voice of shame. It is biased by anger and extinguished by hate. Most of all, it is silenced by ignorance," a quote by American psychiatrist Karl A. Menninger.

After Davy's death was announced to students and faculty, both used social media to spread the news and express their condolences.

"It is very sad news," said Jennifer Vellenga, assistant professor of theater, to her theater forum class Monday. "Very shocking."

Emergency heart surgery

According to a Facebook post made by Lynne on Daniel's page, Daniel was flown to Saint Luke's Hospital for a 6:15 a.m. surgery on Saturday after a cat scan revealed a dissected aorta — a tear in the inner wall of the body's main artery that causes blood to flow between the layers of the artery's wall.

Hours after the initial surgery, while a surgeon was working on a graft for the aorta, Lynne wrote, Daniel passed away from organ failure.

Daniel had plans to retire at the end of the school year. New applicants were being interviewed at the time of his passing. The interviews will continue through next week.

'Not a huge service'

A Facebook post from Marci Maullar, associate professor and managing director of theater, on Tuesday night announced plans for a memorial service Friday at 5 p.m. in All Faiths Chapel.

"Davy said that he did not want any sort of huge service," Vellenga said to her class. "...It will probably be something small in All Faiths Chapel. That is what he would want."

The Collegian will provide further details on Davy's death and funeral services as more information becomes available.

Alt-J tango triumphs at Dancing with the K-State Stars

BY JENA SAUBER
THE COLLEGIAN

During the few minutes Chance Berndt, student ambassador and junior in marketing and international studies, and Michelle Williams, junior in kinesiology, were on stage, the audience was riveted. The Union Program Council had indeed saved the best for last.

After their performance, Berndt and Williams were chosen as the winners of Dancing with the K-State Stars with a final score of 178 out of 180.

The sixth annual event, themed "Evolution of Dance," featured nine duos performing routines to music from the 1960s to the 2000s. Each duo consisted of a K-State "star" and a student with dance experience.

"It was crazy. I would have never have guessed that we'd win," Berndt said. "Michelle really deserves a lot of credit. She worked so hard."

The duo's routine, a tango set to "Tessellate" by Alt-J, received rave reviews from the judges' panel that included YouTube star Judson Laipply; associate professor in the School of Music, Theatre and Dance David Ollington; and Donita Whitney-Bammerlin an instructor from the department of management.

"There wasn't a better dance to end the night," Ollington said during his review of the dance.

The dance, which Williams predominately choreographed, started with a short scene of a love triangle between Williams, Berndt and a third man, played by Chris Zimmerman, senior in music education.

"We chose 'Tessellate,' and I thought of a love triangle," Williams said. "I tried to incorporate that into the dance in different parts."

Two K-State students victims of a home invasion

Two K-State students were the victims of a home invasion and robbery Monday night. Riley County Police responded to a 911 call made shortly before 9:00 p.m. at 1520 Jarvis Drive.

Matthew McKernan, 21, and Joshua Martin, 20, reported they were robbed in the home by three, uninvited male suspects at gunpoint. The suspects hit the two victims, causing minor head injuries, before escaping with a small amount of cash.

The suspects are described as three dark-complected white males. One of the suspects was reported to have a noticeable accent of unknown origin. Matt Droge, public information officer for the RCPD, said that while no new information has been released, the investigation is still ongoing. Police ask anyone with information about the incident to contact them or the Manhattan Riley County Crime Stoppers 785-539-7777 or 1-800-222-TIPS (8477).

Series of fires damage multiple vehicles

A series of building and car fires were reported shortly after Tuesday morning.

Around 2:00 a.m. Tuesday, emergency crews responded to a report of a vehicle fire in the 800 block of Moro Street. About five minutes after their arrival, a second fire was reported in a stairwell of an apartment complex at 801 Moro St.

Approximately 45 minutes later, fire and police officials received an additional vehicle fire complaint at 823 Laramie St. Three cars were affected by the fire, causing a combined total damage of approximately $26,000. Police and fire investigators determined that there was a "high probability" that the fires had been started intentionally.

Anyone with information about the fires is asked to contact the RCPD or Manhattan Riley County Crime Stoppers at 785-539-7777 or 1-800-222-TIPS (8477). A potential cash reward of $1,000 is being offered.

T. Russell Reitz Animal Shelter serves community, animals for 26 years

PHOTOS AND ARTICLE
By JOSH STAAB
THE COLLEGIAN

For almost three decades, abandoned animals – from birds and gerbils, to dogs and cats – have taken refuge in the T. Russell Reitz Animal Shelter, located at 605 Levee Drive.

The shelter’s missions is to, “...(protect) public health, welfare and property through enforcement of city and county ordinances and sheltering of unwanted companion animals, (provide) public education on the care of companion animals, and (promote) humane treatment and responsible pet ownership.”

The most common animals at the T. Russell Reitz are dogs, followed closely by cats. Dogs have a 90 percent adoption rate at the shelter. This is higher than the 20 percent national dog adoption rate, according to the American Pet Products Associ-

The shelter’s current cat adoption rate is 75 percent; the national average is 26 percent, according to APPA.

Despite their adoption rates, not all animals get adopted from the shelter. Caring for the animals on a daily basis requires a staff and volunteers. Volunteers socialize the cats, and help visitors interact with the cats. They also help teach dogs “basic manners,” exercise them, and help visitors interact with them. The shelter is currently looking for volunteers; applicants must be at least 18 years old and pass a background check.

Healthy animals stay at the shelter to be reclaimed by their owner for a duration of five days. After that, they become available for adoption by the public. Animals are generally allowed to stay at the shelter for as long as necessary, so long as they are healthy and mentally stable.

The shelter is open for adoptions Thursday-Tuesday from 1-5:30 p.m. Animals can be reclaimed or surrendered from 3-5:30 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Allen Busby, a Manhattan resident who visits the T. Russell Reitz Animal Shelter every now and then, offers a finger to Sabrina last Friday. Sabrina is a 1-year-old domestic short-haired cat, and has been living in the shelter since October 2013.

Tippy, a domestic short-haired cat, brushes her tail against Me-lissa during one of her outdoor play times on Feb. 18. Tippy is 8 years old, and has been with the shelter since Jan. 12.

A new addition to the T. Russell Reitz Animal Shelter peaks out of his box and through the bars of his cage last Friday.

Lauren Boyles, who has three dogs of her own, checks out whether Chaplin is the right dog for her friend, Emily Pirone. Chaplin, a Great Dane and Poodle mix, is the companion of first-time dog owner Pirone as of last Friday.

Financial responsibility, long-term vision keys to early wealth

ANDY RAO
THE COLLEGIAN

As a college student, many of us have gotten used to cheap meals, meager bank accounts and making tough monetary decisions. With minimum wage jobs and staggering student debt weighing down on your shoulders, your college experience may be somewhat tainted by the stresses of a low budget.

It is possible, however, to escape the cycle of poverty that seems to overshadow many college students; you just have to be willing to work hard. By increasing your cash inflow and decreasing your cash outflow, you can start to improve your financial situation before you venture out into the real world.

Increase your income in a time-efficient manner

One concept that escapes people is that time is your biggest asset. Because you only have 24 hours every day, your first priority when making a financial plan is budgeting your time rather than your money.

As a full-time student, you may have a surplus of free time after you fulfill your academic responsibilities to hang out. Instead of sitting at home and watching Netflix, find a way to earn money. According to K-State's Career and Employment Services website, the university has 2,200 part-time, on-campus jobs every year that students can apply for. With those numbers, there is bound to be a job available for you.

Also, be sure to consider your hourly rate. Although some jobs can give you a 40-hour week, it may only pay you minimum wage. In Kansas, this is $7.25 according to the U.S. Department of Labor. Conversely, other jobs may pay a much higher rate but only offer a few hours of work per week. Valuing your time more than money allows you to earn more dollars per hour so that you can use your remaining time finding another higher-paying part-time job, extra-curricular activity or other sources of income.

Decrease or minimize your debt

The Project on Student Debt, an extensive database dedicated to compiling statistics on costs of attending public universities in the U.S., listed the average student debt of 2012 K-State graduates at $25,147. Even though you technically don't have to start paying your debt until after you graduate, it may be a good idea to start now.

By putting aside a certain amount of money every month, you will be able to make a down payment on your debts after you graduate. For example, even if you put aside $50 per month as a debt payment, you will have about $2,400 at the end of your college career to pay as a lump sum to your creditors. Even though it doesn't seem like a large portion of your overall debt, it is a considerable amount of loans that you can get rid of immediately. Paying no interest on $2,400 is, after all, much better than paying the $2,400 plus interest.

Another option is completely avoiding debt in the first place. K-State awards $18.8 million in scholarships every year based on anything from academics, activities, service and involvement in the community, and financial need. One of the biggest misconceptions about scholarships is that they are only awarded to incoming freshman. If your GPA is higher than 3.0 after your freshman year, you will generally be eligible for a variety of scholarships offered by each of the different colleges.

Don't abandon your search for free money after you get into school; in fact, you may have more luck getting scholarships while you're actually here.

Formulate and follow a strict savings or investment plan

As a student, everyday costs and incidentals that can come up at any time can put a serious dent in your wallet. For this reason, it may be easy to slip into a habit of living paycheck to paycheck as a student. After all, taking it two weeks a time can be a lot less stress and lot less work.

Creating a savings or investment plan can really help you control your unnecessary expenditures, while also building an account that you can use as a rainy day fund. Or create an investment fund to help you grow your cash accumulation for life after higher education.

One way to stick to this is by treating your savings or investments as a mandatory bill from a third party – you. So while you may be paying money out of your pocket every month, that money is just going into another one of your pockets.

This takes planning, foresight and budgeting so in order to do this effectively, you will have to sacrifice some luxuries. The key is balancing your expenses and savings so that you can have long-term plan that gives you a head start on building your net worth.

Acquire specialized skills

As a student, you've taken the first step to creating value in your skill set by simply attending college. But that doesn't mean you can stop now.

As globalization continues to affect the world and the international job market, we no longer compete with just our fellow K-Staters; we compete with the world. So what's different between you and the other hundreds of thousands of students in college that share your major? This is the question that you need to ask yourself and find an answer for if you hope to one day find a fulfilling and well-paying career.

Many students today go through the motion of school. While the saying, "C's get degrees" might be true, you are not adding value to what you bring to your future employer.

Finding skills that are specialized and unique can help you differentiate yourself from other graduates. Things like learning foreign languages, gaining unique technological skills or even building a specialized network in your future industry can give you a leg up. Sure, it may take some additional investment in the form of extra classes or purchasing books and online tutorials, but if you have a little disposable income left, it is important to try to use it in ways that will help you better your future.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Wildcats snap road skid in Lubbock against Red Raiders with 60-56 win

PARKER ROBB | THE COLLEGIAN

Freshman guard Marcus Foster scores a breakaway dunk in the first half of K-State's 65-53 victory over the Horned Frogs in Bramlage Coliseum on Feb. 19.

BY JOHN ZETMEIR
THE COLLEGIAN

For nearly two months, the Wildcats couldn't buy a win away from Bramlage Coliseum, that all changed on Tuesday evening. The Wildcats (19-9, 8-6 Big 12) used a second half surge to slip past the Texas Tech Red Raiders (13-15, 5-10 Big 12) 60-56.

While the home team dominated a majority of the game before a late K-State run, it was an ugly game for both teams on the offensive end. The Wildcats shot only 40.4 percent from the field while the Red Raiders shot just under 37 percent. The Red Raiders had the ball when they were down two points with 20 seconds left, but could not capitalize. In a season that the Wildcats have lost in just about every way on the road, head coach Bruce Weber's team would not fall short again.

The physical size of the home team showed as the Red Raiders dominated the Wildcats on the glass, 34-24. However, four of the Wildcats starters finished the game with double figures in the scoring category.

X-Factor

Nothing can be said to be certain except death, taxes and freshman guard Marcus Foster leading the Wildcats in scoring again. The talented freshman finished Tuesday with 17 points. Foster had a season-low two points against the Texas Tech Red Raiders in the first game in Bramlage Coliseum. However, he is averaging just under 21 points per game since that game. Foster was fairly quiet for a majority of the game, but was one of the catalysts behind the late run that gave the Wildcats the rare road win.

Momentum Swing

Freshman guard Wesley Iwundu drove to the rim with just under 10 minutes left to play in the game. While Iwundu sliced through the Red Raider defense, Texas Tech senior forward Jordan Tolbert yanked the freshman down, getting called for a flagrant foul. From that point, Texas Tech saw their eight-point lead diminish. K-State ran out to a 20-5 run, giving them a 54-47 lead. The Red Raiders would fight back to tie the game up with less than a minute left, but the Wildcats would not falter.

Going Forward

K-State will return to Bramlage Saturday, where they are undefeated this season in Big 12 play, to battle No. 15 Iowa State. The Cyclones will try to end the Wildcats perfect conference record in front of their home fans. Tipoff is set for 6 p.m.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Wildcats set to play spoiler role against Jayhawks

BY EMILIO RIVERA
THE COLLEGIAN

The K-State women's basketball team is looking to stave off its fifth road loss in a row tonight when they travel to Allen Fieldhouse in Lawrence to take on their in-state rival Kansas. The Wildcats (10-16, 4-11 Big 12) are fresh off of a dismantling loss at the hands of No. 13 West Virginia on Saturday night, and are looking to break a three-game losing streak against the Jayhawks. The Jayhawks (12-15, 5-10 Big 12) are fresh off of two losses on the road, and haven't lost to the Wildcats in over two-years, the last loss coming Feb. 12, 2012.

The last two games for Kansas head coach Bonnie Henrickson's team have been close ones, losing to both Iowa State and Oklahoma last week by a combined six-points. The Jayhawks were led on their two-game road trip by their junior forward Chelsea Gardner, who had 31 points and 18 rebounds combined.

Gardner has consistently been the best player for the Jayhawks throughout the season. She ranks in the top 5 in both points per game and rebounding, averaging 16.8 points and 8.5 rebounds per game. Because of Gardner, the Jayhawks are a dangerous team in the paint, and can get multiple second-chance opportunities. Gardner also makes her presence known in the paint on defense; the 6-foot 3-inch Gardner uses her length to disrupt shots close to the basket, averaging 1.9 blocks per game, a factor that could force the Wildcats to get-going from around the arc.

The Wildcats understand the presence that Gardner and her teammates bring to the floor can create issues.

"(Gardner) is a great player, the big 12 is very high caliber and has very high-talented teams with athletic players on each and every team," K-State senior forward Katya Leick said. "KU has very good athletes and we have to approach them like we would every other team, we have to be prepared. Gardner is a great player and we just have to go with what the coaches tell us and the game plan."

GEORGE WALKER | THE COLLEGIAN

Senior forward Katya Leick looks to pass around Kansas guard Asia Boyd on Jan. 25 in Bramlage Coliseum.

This game means a lot for the seniors of the team, as it will be the last time that the seniors will play their in-state rivals. As Leick and her fellow senior forward Ashlynn Knoll were transfers to the Wildcat team, they have yet to nab a win against their Kansas, losing in all three of their opportunities.

Mistakes and turnovers late in the game could play a tremendous part in the game. The Wildcats and Jayhawks rank eighth and ninth respectively in the Big 12 in turnover margin, both averaging more than a two-turnover deficit handling the ball.

"We have had some games where we were so close and we were like we could have won that game," Leick said. "I know that, especially against our in-state rival, that's something that we don't want to ever end on our last time playing (Kansas) being a 'what if' or 'could have.' I really feel like if we give it our all and play well, that it will be a good game and hopefully we come out with the win."

With their postseason outlook already looking bleak, the Wildcats can look ahead to playing the spoiler against the Jayhawks. The Jayhawks, with three-games left in their regular season, could pull within .500 if they win the rest of their games and could make it into postseason play. The Wildcats, with a win, could immediately knock the Jayhawks from post-season contention.

"As I head into this game, I'm just really focused on to try to prepare just for the hard and fast elements of playing KU and their talent," head coach Deb Patterson said. "If we were to win and were in that spoiler role, I guess that adds another layer to the rivalry. But we're a long way from that, they beat us the first time around on our own floor, so we know we have our hands full because they have so much that they are playing for."

With the game having so much meaning for the seniors as they play in their last few games, the Wildcats could manage to add one last highlight to their season. Tipoff is set for 7 p.m. in Allen Fieldhouse.

MLS SOCCER

Sporting KC focuses on MLS opener despite upcoming CCL

PARKER ROBB | THE COLLEGIAN

Sporting KC midfielder Graham Zusi attempts to advance the ball past Houston Dynamo defender Corey Ashe during the MLS Eastern Conference championship game Nov. 23, at Sporting Park.

BY TATE STEINLAGE
THE COLLEGIAN

The reigning Major League Soccer champions haven't had long to celebrate their triumph. Six weeks after topping Real Salt Lake in a thrilling shootout on Dec. 7, Sporting Kansas City was boarding a plane for Tucson, Ariz. for the first stint of preseason action.

Now the MLS season is less than two weeks away. Sporting KC will start the year on the road in Seattle, Wash. against the Sounders before turning around and competing in the CONCACAF Champions League knockout stage four days later against Mexican side Cruz Azul.

Cruz Azul is currently undefeated and atop the Liga MX standings. More importantly, they're a team in midseason form. Sporting KC, however, is not.

But even with the key matchup against Cruz Azul looming, Sporting KC manager Peter Vermes said the attention is on the Sounders.

"I think everybody knows on our team that our focus is Seattle," Vermes said. "That's the first team we have to play. Everyone realizes that it's our most important game at the moment."

Between both matchups, Sporting KC will have their hands full early on. But this team's core can get the job done. Twenty-five players return to Sporting KC from last year's roster, including 10 of the 11 MLS Cup starters.

The "We defend together" motto Sporting KC adopted in 2014 will certainly be put to the test right out of the gate.

News you care about.

DANCING| Ollington says Berndt's, Williams' performance was 'riveting'

PARKER ROBB | THE COLLEGIAN

Michelle Williams, junior in kinesiology, and Chance Berndt, junior in marketing and international studies and K-State student ambassador, receive the mirror ball trophies for winning season six of Dancing with the K-State Stars.

Berndt said he felt that the performance was, "something you wouldn't expect from us."

"You wouldn't expect a tango that's angry," Berndt said. "It turned out better than I thought it would. I thought I'd mess up at least once, but I didn't."

Ollington described the duo's performance as "riveting."

"I was glued to it," he said in his review of the dance.

Combination of decades, music

Christina Hurtado, coordinator for student development for the department of housing and dining, and her partner Zimmerman also won the judges' attention with their waltz to "Say Something" by A Great Big World featuring Christina Aguilera.

They received the next highest score from the judge's initial reviews, after Berndt and Williams.

"It was nerve wracking," Hurtado said. "We were glad when it was over, but it was definitely a lot of fun."

Other performances included a 1960s jazz routine by Katy Za-pletal, admissions representative, and Joey Boos, senior in theater; a 1970s salsa performance by Adam Miller, admissions representative, and Janet Galloway, graduate student in family studies and human services; and a 1980s jazz routine by Brett Eichman, senior in music education and marching band assistant drum major, and Jamie Teixeira, junior in English.

"As the drum major, he doesn't dance," Marissa Archuleta, senior in music education, said. "It was out of his element. It was cool to see him incorporate some of the band stuff with some of [Teixeira's] stuff."

Paige Wright, junior in elementary education, said she was impressed with Eichman's and other's performances.

"He did pretty dang well," Wright said. "Everyone did really well."

Other performances included a 1990s hip hop performance by Brett Seidl, co-chair of the Your Union campaign and senior in public relations, and Grace Pierson, sophomore in theater; a 1970s modern routine performed by Kaitlyn Dewell, Miss K-State 2013 and senior in journalism, and Carolyn Fitzgibbons, senior in theater; a 1980s county-swing routine by Kaitlin Long, Student Governing Association Speaker Pro Tem and senior in entrepreneurship, and Isaac Spear, sophomore in engineering; and a 1990s hip hop-step routine by Allie Niederee, K-State Proud co-chair and junior in kinesiology, and Mikel Neil, senior in kinesiology.

Winning team

Following the performances, guest judge Laipply, comedian and star of the YouTube hit "Evolution of Dance," performed his viral hit. His performance updated the original YouTube version, posted eight years ago, and included more modern hits such as Carly Rae Jepsen's "Call Me Maybe," and Psy's "Gangnam Style."

All the dancers were brought back on to the stage for the announcement of the winners following Laipply's performance.

While waiting for the reveal, Williams said she was wasn't sure where they had landed in the standings.

"It was really unexpected," she said. "But it was awesome."
